NHRA shocker: Alan Johnson Racing halts operations	https://motorsports.nbcsports.com/2015/09/15/nhra-shocker-alan-johnson-racing-halts-operations/	"On the eve of the start of it's premier event, the Countdown to the Championship, the National Hot Rod Association was rocked Tuesday with news that Alan Johnson Racing is suspending operations of its Top Fuel team, effective immediately. That means 2013 Top Fuel champ Shawn Langdon, who qualified sixth for the Countdown, will likely miss his bid to go for a second championship in three seasons. "We are extremely disappointed to make this decision, but at this point it is our best option," team owner Alan Johnson said in a statement.	NA	NA

		“The AJR marketing staff has worked diligently throughout the year securing funding to complete the 2015 season. Unfortunately we have come up a bit short.” AJR has struggled with funding since its primary sponsor and benefactor, Sheikh Khalid bin Hamad Al Thani and the Qatar Racing Club, suspended funding for Johnson’s two-dragster Al-Anabi Racing team just four weeks before this year’s season-opening Circle K Winternationals."
NHRA Shocker: Qatar Racing Club suspends sponsorship, Al-Anabi Plans TBD	https://motorsports.nbcsports.com/2015/01/05/nhra-shocker-qatar-racing-club-suspends-sponsorship-al-anabi-plans-tbd/	The Qatar Racing Club has terminated funding for all motorsports activities in North America. This decision includes the two-car Al-Anabi Racing Team operated by Alan Johnson Racing, the team announced today. The decision was made in the final days of 2014, and team members were notified this morning. “We are obviously surprised and disappointed about this completely unexpected turn of events,” Alan Johnson Racing team	NA	NA

	owner Alan Johnson said. “Our plans for the 2015 NHRA season were nearing completion starting with pre-season testing next week in (West Palm Beach) Florida and the first race of the 2015 NHRA season a month from today in (Pomona) California. Many things are uncertain, and our situation is obviously still evolving. We are currently exploring our options, and we hope to have more news in the near future.”
